AMP-activated protein kinase (AMPK) is an heterotrimeric enzyme that maintains energy homeostasis. We investigated the presence and expression of AMPK subunits and their role in cell death, differentiation and cell cycle regulation in human neuroblastoma and prostate cancer. The presence and expression of the AMPK subunits, AMPKalpha1 and AMPKalpha2, and of Thr(172) phosphorylated AMPKalpha1, were analyzed by immunofluorescence and immunoblotting in human neuroblastoma and prostate cancer. To investigate the importance of AMPK activation in cell viability, cell differentiation and cell cycle regulation, N2a and PC3 cells were treated with the AMPK activator 5-aminoimidazole-4-carboxamide ribonucleoside (AICAR) and the cell viability was assessed. The role of AMPK activation in cell differentiation was evaluated by induction of E-cadherin expression. The changes in cell proliferation rate in response to AMPK activation were measured by cell cycle analysis. AMPK is expressed in human neuroblastoma and prostate cancer. Immunoblot analysis shows an overall increase in AMPK alpha expression in neuroblastoma and prostate cancer cell lines. The expression of both AMPK alpha1 and alpha2 is further increased in response to AICAR in N2a and PC3 cells
